While it remains essential in many sub-Saharan African countries to continue advocacy for increased investments in health, there is substantial untapped potential residing in the human capital and indigenous knowledge of the end-users. Improving the delivery capacity of national health services in Africa goes beyond declarations and increased nancing. It also requires the input of communities. The 2020 study False Promises: The Alliance for a Green Revolution in Africa (AGRA) is the report card on the Gates' 14-year effort. The investigation concludes that the number of Africans suffering extreme hunger has increased by 30 percent in the 18 countries that Gates targeted. He effectively forced Africans, in Michael Pollan's words, to eat oil. African farmers call Gates' program climate-stupid agriculture. Gates has learned to fatten himself on global crises, whether it's pandemics, climate, famine or mass extinction. Climate change has given Gates an excuse to create monopolies over seed, food and agriculture.
