Drawing from the horizons of science, today's leading thinkers reveal the hidden threats nobody is talking about-and expose the false fears everyone else is distracted by. What should we be worried about? That is the question John Brockman, publisher of ( The world's smartest website -The Guardian), posed to the planet's most influential minds. He asked them to disclose something that, for scientific reasons, worries them-particularly scenarios that aren't on the popular radar yet. Encompassing neuroscience, economics, philosophy, physics, psychology, biology, and more-here are 150 ideas that will revolutionize your understanding of the world. Steven Pinker uncovers the real risk factors for war * Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi peers into the coming virtual abyss * Nobel laureate Frank Wilczek laments our squandered opportunities to prevent global catastrophe * Seth Lloyd calculates the threat of a financial black hole * Alison Gopnik on the loss of childhood * Nassim Nicholas Taleb explains why firefighters understand risk far better than economic experts * Matt Ridley on the alarming re-emergence of superstition * Daniel C. Dennett and George Dyson ponder the...

A handful of them are just weird or almost incomprehensible. A load of them are worrying about ridiculous, or possibly misunderstood, things which will be swept out of the way by time, history, destiny or technology. Some of them, sensibly, tell you that you really shouldn't be all that worried after all, except about things you can do nothing about anyway. An awful lot of these items are just forgettable soon after putting the book down. I don't regret reading it, but as you can see it produces very mixed reactions about the extent to which it was worth it. It won't change the world.
