It shows a smiling attractive young woman holding a chimp, its arm around her neck in an embrace. Aptly, the image brings to mind the title of her father John Ward's book about his long struggle to track down Julie's killers, 'The Animals are Innocent'. It took Mr Ward a decade of his life and a good part of his business fortune - £500,000 at the last count - to finally see the man he had long regarded as the prime suspect, Simon Makallah, brought to the courts. His campaign to find Julie's killer or killers saw him battle against officialdom, suspected cover-ups and Julie was last seen alive on September 6, 1988, after she travelled to the Masai Mara with an Australian friend, Dr Glen Burns. After their Suzuki jeep broke down, she spent the night alone at the Mara Serena lodge because Dr Burns had to return to Nairobi. The next day, the jeep repaired, she drove to the nearby Sand River camp to recover her camping equipment. Three years after Julie's death, Mr Ward published a book, The Animals are Innocent: The Search for Julie's Killers, in which he wrote movingly about finding his daughter's remains. Julie was cremated after her remains were returned to Britain and her ashes were scattered at a private location. Mr Ward wrote of finding his daughter: "The tall man said, 'Come. This is what we have found'.
