Bulletin board, class Whale book, or class Web site This activity allows students to choose their favorite whale and gather information into a fact sheet format. As they are preparing the fact sheet, suggest that they gather "fun" facts about whales that can be used in the project, such as: bowhead baleen is twice as long as a six-foot-tall human. The great whales are always of interest to students. Whale mothers produce 100-130 gallons of milk per day that is 55 percent fat (like whipping cream!). Subjects. - Biology. As for the book-binder's whale winding like a vine-stalk round the stock of a descending anchor-as stamped and gilded on the backs and title-pages of many books both old and new-that is a very picturesque but purely fabulous creature, imitated, I take it, from the like figures on antique vases. In the vignettes and other embellishments of some ancient books you will at times meet with very curious touches at the whale, where all manner of spouts, jets d'eau, hot springs and cold, Saratoga and Baden-Baden, come bubbling up from his unexhausted brain. In the title-page of the original edition of the "Advancement of Learning" you will find some curious whales. I know of only four published outlines of the great Sperm Whale; Colnett's, Huggins's, Frederick Cuvier's, and Beale's. Few books on the subject, however, have attained the classic stature of the present volume. Written by a famed marine artist, born in the whaling center of New Bedford, Massachusetts, this book presents whaling from the vantage point of one who not only sailed aboard a whaler himself, but possessed the observant eye of an artist and the literary skill to record what he saw and thought as the great age of whaling drew to a close. Salted with wit and wisdom of a Yankee seaman, Ashley's engrossing account presents the "bloody and desperate quest" for the great whales and their value
