Book Description From the writer of "The Country Diary of an Edwardian Lady", these "Nature Notes" from 1905 feature a selection of Edith Holden's watercolours of birds, flowers and landscapes, together with journal extracts, anecdotes and poems. Edith Blackwell Holden (1871–1920) was a British artist and art teacher, known in her time as an illustrator of children's books. Much influenced by the Arts and Crafts movement, she specialized in painting animals and plants. Holden was made famous! Edith’s Diary is as original, as funny, as cleverly written and as moving as any novel I have read since I started reviewing” AUBERON WAUGH, EVENING STANDARD “. A novel the suspense of which is sane and grounded, alive with an understanding which is altogether without condescension” SUNDAY TIMES “. With Edith’s Diary, Patricia Highsmith has produced a masterpiece” TIMES LITERARY SUPPLEMENT “. At first glance, Patricia Highsmith’s Edith’s Diary may seem like an odd choice for a “forgotten book” pick. Highsmith, who passed away in 1995, has hardly been forgotten. In many countries, especially in Europe, she remains a household name, and last year she topped a London Times list as the best mystery writers of all time.
