An acquisition is a corporate action in which one company purchases most or all of another company's shares to gain control of that company. An acquisition is often friendly, while a takeover can be hostile; a merger creates a brand new entity from two separate companies. Real-World Example of Acquisitions. AOL and Time Warner (2000). Patron-Driven Acquisitions (PDA) is a new model used for e-book acquisition by academic libraries. A key component of this model is to make records of e-books available in a library catalog and let actual patron usage decide whether or not an item is purchased. However, there has been a lack of research examining the role of the library catalog as a tool for e-book discovery and use in PDA.
