Sinners, Lovers and Heroes: An Essay on Memorializing in Three American Cultures. November 1998 Â Contemporary Sociology. Shaunna L Scott.Â This essay explores how Marie Corelli shapes her emerging authorial persona in her second novel Ardath: The Story of a Dead Self. Corelli's concern to define authentic creativity and to emphasize ascetic selflessness leads her to redefine the standard Romantic notion of inspired genius. Departing from the image that she created in her first novel of an inspired genius who mindlessly channels the Knowing and minding the specificity of another culture is very important and in this case the Lewis model comes in handy. According to the scientist, people from all over the world can be divided into 3 clear categories, based not on nationality or religion but on behaviour.Â If you have problems with understanding someone from other culture, taking a look at this scheme will be a great help for you. It would help you to see clearer your differences, find something common and then define an intersection point, which, in its turn, would help you to build an efficient communication.Â However, you should always remember, that if a person belongs to one of three cultural types, it doesn't mean s/he lacks some elements from other types. The question is which is the dominant. Sinners, Lovers, and Heroes: An Essay on Memorializing in Three American Cultu.. Pre-Owned. Talk about it can be very long - interesting topics for discussion more than.Â She fell in love not with him, but with a fashionable hero. Her feeling for him can be compared to the feeling for Grushnitsky - Mary sees in the different people the same thing: Pechorin's tragedy of disappointment does not differ for her from Grushnitsky's disillusioned mask. If the protagonist had not come to the waters, most likely the girl would have fallen in love with Grushnitsky, married him, despite the resistance of her mother, and would have been happy with him. What justifies Mary. But is it possible to blame the heroine so unconditionally?
